Millered St. Hungard, a December of the Stock Astes solved for an identised discover from Herry E. Bunnetness: Mr. Hanghard a un inclused for a big Jubber compant, and he wife may he watery is

The story of the visit and the very even and perfunctory was humban and wife greet each other was told by Mrs. Orisphia Stgior, Mrs. Blanchard's mother, who came all the way from Cleveland, O., to tell it.

"We had some definite information that Mr. Honehard was in a young woman's apartments at No. 245 West Fifty-first street," said Mrs. Sigier, and we desided to go there and find out for microclyca.

"My daughter opened the door to this lady's apartment her name was Mrs. Walker, I believe-and then we walked in.

Here Justice Giegerich wanted to know if the door was open, for if that had been the case it might have been a collusive affair between husband and wife.

"No, my daughter opened the door with a key," replied the witness. "Well we walked in," continued Mrs. Sigler. "Mr. Blanchard and this woman were fast asleep. My daughter switched on the electric lights and said to her husband who woke with a start: 'Good morning, Harry,' Then Mr. Blanchard replied: 'Oh, is that you Millie? Good morning,""

"I said 'good morning, Harry' too," Mrs. Sigler went on, "but Harry turned his head and didn't answer me. It was before 6 o'clock in the morning and I guess all were tired." The mystery of the key was solved by William McVeigh, a detective who lived temporarily in the Fifty-first Street house.

"While I was living there," said
McVeigh, "one of my operatives got
